NEXT GENERATION QUARTZ

Our Next Generation Quartz technology shows our emphasis on pushing industry boundaries and redefining standards through three main aspects:

-  The use of clean energy and recycled water.
-  Decreased amount of crystalline silica.
-  The beauty of our quartzite-looking colors.

Our effort for clean energy comes through our investment of approximately $4.6 million in solar panels strategically placed throughout our Sejong plant in Korea. This allowed us a significant decrease in CO<sub>2</sub> emissions by about 690 tons and a 15% reduction in our energy use for HanStone and other products.

HanStone products have also seen a notable cut in the portion of crystalline silica in their composition through the use of premium material. They are going from 93% of crystalline silica in traditional quartz to between 65% and 35% crystalline silica.

With our Next Generation Quartz technology, we strive to set an example of forward-thinking innovation in design and responsible manufacturing.

Join us on this journey as we redefine what's possible in quartz design.
